Stelae I

Picture Description¹⁾

A low-angle view of concrete structures against a vibrant orange sky.

Analysis¹⁾

This photograph presents a striking, almost surreal perspective of the Memorial to the Murdered Jews of Europe in Berlin. The perspective is low, looking upwards, accentuating the monolithic concrete slabs against an intensely orange sky, perhaps a sunset or sunrise. The color palette is bold and dramatic, with the slabs appearing in deep shades of red and teal where light catches their edges, contrasting sharply with the fiery orange sky. The composition emphasizes the scale and imposing nature of the memorial, evoking a sense of disorientation and unease, effectively communicating the weight of history and the profound loss it commemorates.
