A low-angle shot of a window with plants in pots sitting on the sill.

Analysis¹⁾

This photograph captures a window from a low-angle perspective, emphasizing the architectural details of the building's facade. The window frame is made of textured stone, contrasting with the brick wall beside it. Inside the window, two potted plants—a fern and a leafy bush—sit on the windowsill, suggesting life and domesticity within the structure. The plants are partially illuminated by sunlight, highlighting their green foliage against the muted backdrop of the window's reflection.
