Rye LXV

Picture Description¹⁾

A field of wheat or barley, with stalks bending in a uniform direction, partially illuminated by sunlight.

Analysis¹⁾

This photograph captures a field of wheat, seemingly just before harvest. The stalks are bowed, suggesting the weight of the grain or perhaps the gentle pressure of the wind. The light is dramatic, creating a contrast between the illuminated tops of the wheat and the shadowy depths beneath. The overall effect is one of serene beauty, conveying the timeless cycle of nature and the bounty of the earth.
