Water Tower V

Picture Description<sup>1)</sup>

A low-angle shot shows a tall, weathered concrete structure with orange stripes against a dark background.

This striking architectural photograph, shot from a low angle, captures the imposing scale and textures of a concrete structure at night. The stark contrast between the aged, mottled concrete and the deep black background emphasizes the monumentality of the forms. The composition draws the eye upward, following the converging lines of the structure toward a cylindrical tower adorned with orange and white stripes. Details such as the number '268' stenciled on one of the concrete elements, along with the parallel pipes and metal walkways, add layers of visual interest and a sense of industrial decay. The photograph evokes a feeling of timelessness and the enduring presence of human construction against the vastness of the night.
