Bahnhofstrasse XVIII

Picture Description¹⁾

A monochrome cityscape scene with pedestrians, a tram, and buildings under contrasting light and shadow, captured through a reflective surface.

Analysis¹⁾

This black and white photograph captures a bustling street scene, likely in Zurich given the "Bahnhofstrasse" sign prominently displayed on a building in the foreground. The photograph is framed as if viewed through a window, creating a layered effect with reflections on the glass. A tram occupies a significant portion of the right side of the frame, its passengers visible through the windows. In the street, pedestrians are seen walking and crossing the road, adding to the sense of urban activity. The background features a large building with a repetitive grid of windows, providing a sense of depth and scale. The high contrast and stark black and white tones contribute to a sense of timelessness and urban grit, while the reflections add a touch of abstraction.
