Skeleton II

Picture Description¹⁾

A whimsical chalk drawing of a skeleton decorates a stone wall next to a dark doorway.

Analysis¹⁾
