Self in Berlin Mirror

Picture Description¹⁾

A photographer in a beret takes a photograph in front of a large window.

Analysis¹⁾

This black and white photograph captures a person holding a camera up to their face, seemingly in the act of taking a photograph. The subject is wearing a dark beret and clothing, which contrasts with the bright, out-of-focus background, possibly a window or mirrored surface reflecting an urban landscape. The vintage feel of the photograph, likely achieved through film photography, enhances the artistic and documentary qualities, inviting the viewer to contemplate the role of the photographer as both observer and creator.
