Memmingen in Water I

Picture Description<sup>1)</sup>

Abstract black and white photograph capturing the reflections of buildings in water.

Analysis<sup>1)</sup>

This black and white photograph captures a distorted yet captivating urban scene. The photograph is a reflection in water, likely a canal or river, of buildings lining the waterway. The ripples on the watersurface create an abstract, almost painterly effect, blurring the sharp edges of the architecture and transforming familiar forms into fluid shapes. A portion of a metal railing and concrete embankment is visible in the foreground, anchoring the reflection and hinting at the viewer's perspective on the edge of the water. The high contrast and tonal range of the black and white palette emphasize the textures and interplay of light and shadow, enhancing the dreamlike quality of the scene. The inverted perspective further destabilizes the viewer's perception, prompting a closer examination of the abstract forms and the relationship between reality and representation.
